International Program in Applied Ethics

Leuven | Nijmegen | Macerata

The international program in applied ethics is jointly promoted by the University of Macerata - 'G. Leopardi' School of Higher Studies, the Catholic University of Leuven (Belgium) and the Radboud University Nijmegen (The Netherlands).

The program is addressed to 3rd year Bachelor students and consists in 4 seminars (20 hours in total), followed by a paper elaboration and presentation by the students in a final discussion.

The seminars are given by the teachers of the three universities involved and address different domains of applied ethics. Every year the Scientific committee decides the topics of the different domains and the number of participants admitted.

The seminars are held in the first semester of each academic year, between October and December, and take place both in Macerata (for Macerata students), and in Leuven (for Leuven and Nijmegen students). Every teacher gives the same seminar twice: once in Macerata, and once in Leuven. Before each seminar students are required to prepare, and to do some preliminary readings. Readings requirements are defined by each teacher in due time.

With regard to the paper elaboration, each student can choose a seminar in which he/she would like to write his/her final paper. In order to write the paper, students need do additional readings, according to the indications given by the supervising teacher. The papers (no longer than 25 pages) will be presented in a final discussion where all the teachers and students participate. The final discussion takes place in the second semester, usually between April and May.

The whole program gives 12 credits to the students involved.

The seminars given in the academic year 2010/2011 will address the following domains:

Economic Ethics
Ethics of Migration Policy
Environmental Ethics
Legal Ethics.
